Place the client’s interests first. Placing the client’s interests first is a hallmark of professionalism, requiring Employees to act honestly and not place personal and/or Employer gain or advantage, economic or otherwise, before the client’s interests.

2. Integrity

Provide professional services with integrity. Integrity requires honesty, candour, fair dealing and truthfulness in all professional matters. Employees are placed in a position of trust by clients and the ultimate foundation of that trust is their personal integrity. Allowances can be made for legitimate differences of opinion, but integrity cannot co-exist with deceit or subordination of one’s principles. Integrity requires Employees to observe both the letter and the spirit of the law and the Code of Ethics and Business Conduct. Integrity further implies that Employees shall not:

- give recommendations that they are not accredited to give, or that they suspect, or reasonably should have suspected, to be false or misleading

Threats to objectivity may occur in various situations and forms, including, but not limited to, the following:

- A personal or economic interest of the Employee, a family member, or a person of close relationship or acquaintance with the Employee
- The promotion of a specific opinion, service or product by an Employee, due to personal or economic interest

Be fair and reasonable in all professional relationships. Disclose and manage conflicts of interest. Fairness requires providing clients with their due, whatever they are owed, or what may be expected from a professional relationship and includes honesty, and disclosure of material conflicts of interest. It involves managing one’s own feelings, prejudices and desires to achieve a proper balance of interests. Fairness is treating others as you would want to be treated.

5. Professionalism

Act in a manner that demonstrates exemplary professional conduct. Professionalism requires behaving with dignity, showing respect and courtesy to clients, fellow professionals and others in business-related activities, and complying with appropriate rules, regulations and professional requirements. Professionalism requires Employees, individually and in co-operation with peers, to enhance and maintain the business’s brand and image, and its ability to serve the interest of clients and consumers at large. The elements of professionalism include the following:

- To render services of a high standard, in accordance with the Code and the applicable laws of the Republic of South Africa.

6. Competence

Competence requires Employees to make a continuing commitment to learning and professional improvement.

7. Confidentiality

Protect the confidentiality of all client information. Confidentiality requires client information to be protected and maintained in such a way that access is only allowed to those who are authorised or entitled, according to the laws of the Republic of South Africa. In order to protect the interests of the Employer and its Employees, the Employer reserves the right to monitor or review all data and information contained on an Employee's company-issued computer, contained on an electronic device, the use of the Internet, the use of the Employer's intranet; with or without Employee notice. During employment, Employees may be issued company property including a computer, laptop, cell phone, printer, pager, or hand held mobile device. Employees are expected to take proper precautions to care for the Employer's equipment. Upon termination, Employees are expected to return all company equipment in proper working order. Failure to return equipment may be considered to be theft and may lead to criminal prosecution.

In the course of employment, Employees will be exposed to the Employer's confidential information. Confidential information is defined as confidential and proprietary information of the Employer to which the general public does not have access. This will include client lists and information, systems, procedures, policies, strategies, research, business plans, financial data, strategies, price lists, formulas, techniques, technology, confidential reports, computer software, telephone lists, contract forms, files and all other information, knowledge, or data of any kind or nature relating to the products, services, or business of the Employer. Employees are also prohibited from accessing files, databases, and other company resources which they do not have authorisation to access.

Those in violation will be subject to disciplinary action, up to and including termination. Violations may also result in legal action.

Every business transaction undertaken by an Employee must be recorded on the necessary business system accurately, in full, and in a timely manner.

Employees must be candid and accurate when providing information for these records and never make false or misleading entries. All records must be correct and complete in all material respects.

4. Business Working Environment

The Employer is committed to a work environment in which all individuals are treated with dignity and respect. It is our policy to ensure equal employment opportunity without discrimination or harassment on the basis of race, colour, religion, age, gender, disability, marital status or any other characteristic protected by law.

The Employer expects that all relationships among persons in the workplace will be business-like and free of bias, harassment, or violence. The Employer also prohibits retaliation against any individual who, in good faith, reports discrimination or harassment, or any individual who participates in, or otherwise supports, an investigation of such reports.

Misconduct, including discrimination, harassment, retaliation or other forms of unprofessional behaviour will not be tolerated. Such behaviour, even if not unlawful, will subject offending Employees to corrective action by the Employer, up to and including termination of the Employees employment contract or mandate. In addition, conduct that is unlawful may subject offending Employees to civil and criminal penalties.

5. Employee Health and Safety

The Employer is committed to conducting its business in compliance with all applicable environmental and workplace health and safety laws and regulations. In every instance, Employer approval must be gained before any Employee may work in any capacity outside of the Company.

Listed below is a general overview of acceptable business casual attire as well as a listing of some of the more common items that are not appropriate for our work environment. Neither listing is intended to be all inclusive. Rather, these items should help set the general parameters for proper business casual attire wear and allow Employees to make intelligent judgments about items that are not specifically addressed.

- Unacceptable: Shorts, T-shirts, athletic shoes, sweat pants, sweat shirts, tops with spaghetti straps, cargo pants, tank tops, and flip flops

Where possible, reasonable accommodation may be made to a person with a disability or to accommodate a person's religious beliefs.

9. Reporting Misconduct

The Employer's reputation for integrity depends upon its Employees. Employees are the Company's first line of defence against professional liability and unethical business practices. Employees have a duty to notify the Business Owner or Key Individual if they believe they may have violated the law or Company policies or if they observe or become aware of any illegal, unethical, or otherwise improper conduct relating to the Employer, or conduct that could have an impact on the Employer's reputation.

If Employee concerns relate to the conduct of the Business Owner or Key Individual, they also may report their concerns to the Employer's Compliance Officer. As appropriate, the Compliance Officer will take steps to stop any misconduct and to prevent its recurrence.

10. Non-Retaliation Commitment

The Employer prohibits retaliation for reports or complaints regarding the misconduct of others that were made in good faith. Open communication of issues and concerns by all without fear of retribution is vital to the continued success of the Company.
